Program Description

The RCSM student leadership training program is aimed to help you take action to spread awareness about humanitarian causes you care about. Through the program, we will explore a variety of local and global humanitarian issues, then teach you the tools and methodology to create interactive and engaging presentations. We will also provide logistical training regarding how to organize presentations at local elementary and middle schools.

At the end of the program, you'll be ready to create your own presentations and to take on leadership roles in your school and community. Upon completion of all program requirements, a certificate will be awarded.

It starts with YOU!

Where do you normally hear about global issues? Is it through your peers? online? teachers? Regardless of where you've heard it from, it all came from somebody. The impact that we can create from simply spreading awareness about an issue that we care about is absolutely mesmerizing. Thus, the goal of our program is to empower the youth of tomorrow to speak up and spread awareness about the severity of humanitarian issues. Through these presentations, not only will we inform one student but tens and hundreds. This is the key to how you can make a difference in your community.

“If people don’t know they won’t care, if people don’t care they won’t act.”

09 Who we are

The Red Cross Student Movement (RCSM) is a student-driven initiative that aims to build a humanitarian network across the Lower Mainland. We want to provide student leaders like you with the tools and resources to take action on global issues, as well as plan workshops, events, and campaigns to help address those issues at a local level within your school and community.

10 The Facilitators

Andrew Sheroubi

Andrew is the current Director (and one of the founders) of the Red Cross Student Movement. He has experience creating and facilitating dozens of workshops and presentations and has a Facilitation Certificate from the Canadian Red Cross. Andrew is deeply passionate about global humanitarian causes. Throughout his time at UBC studying chemical and biological engineering he was very involved with a variety of organizations such as Engineers Without Borders (EWB) and the Canadian Red Cross. He was also president of the UBC Red Cross club for two years. During his final year, Andrew created and ran a Humanitarian Engineering course at UBC and published a paper in the Canadian Engineering Education journal.

Sumara Stroshein

Sumara has been involved with RCSM for over 4 years and is currently the Director of Outreach. She is currently a student in the Faculty of Health Sciences at Simon Fraser University and has been extensively involved in community engagement projects both on and off campus. Sumara is passionate about humanitarian issues including addressing the social determinants of health (such as food and water security) within a local and global context. She is currently the Food Systems Change Coordinator for Embark Sustainability and was nominated by the University Social Responsibility Network at SFU to participate in a health promotion project for rural children and families in Sichuan, China. She is experienced in event logistics and workshop development and has provided facilitation training to numerous student groups.

Naveed Hassanzadeh

Naveed is currently studying Microbiology and Biochemistry at Simon Fraser University and is actively engaged in the university community and beyond. He is an executive member of both the SFU Blood for Life and the SFU Red Cross student groups on campus and he is heavily involved in his community as a youth volunteer at the Muslim Food Bank. Naveed has been volunteering with RCSM for over 4 years and has experience facilitating workshops on numerous humanitarian causes and delivering facilitation training to groups of students. In 2018, Naveed was the Conference Director for the annual Humanitarians in Training conference held at UBC.
